City of Healdsburg: Local Economic Report

June 2010

The Sonoma County Economic Development Board (EDB), in partnership with the Sonoma County Work-force Investment Board, is pleased to bring you the 2010 City of Healdsburg Local Economic Report.

Highlights from this Local Economic Report include:

- Between 2000 and 2009, median-household income in Healdsburg increased 32.8% nominally, or 6.6% in real (inflation-adjusted) dollars. Over the same period, the percentage of households making over $100,000 increased 12.3 points. Over the next five years, median-household incomes are projected to climb an additional 3.8% nominally to just over $67,000.
- Residential housing vacancy rates have been increasing in Healdsburg. Up from 4.1% in 2000, 8.6% of housing was vacant in 2009. Five-year projections expect the vacancy rate to remain near 8.6%. Office and retail vacancy rates in Healdsburg have remained below county averages.
- The Healdsburg economy is expected to track in line with Sonoma County's performance. Improvements in the labor market will lag improvements in its core industries. Current forecasts suggest the unemployment rate will start to show improvement during the latter half of 2010.

Thank you for your continued interest in the EDB reports. As always, if you have any questions, please feel free to contact us at (707) 565-7170.

Sincerely,

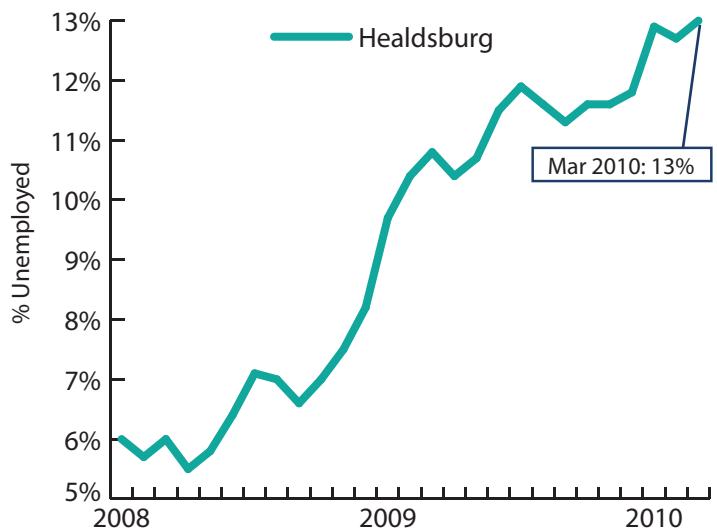

Ben Stone
Executive Director

Healdsburg's seasonally unadjusted unemployment rate for the first quarter of 2010 was 12.5%, above the county average over the same quarter. Healdsburg's unemployment is up considerably from the first quarter of 2008 when the unemployment rate registered 5.9%. Currently, Healdsburg matches California's unemployment rate but is above the national level.

The population of Healdsburg plateaued in 2002 after sharp growth during much of the 1990s. Between 2002 and 2008, the population increased by 64 residents.

Total employment in Healdsburg has been in decline for the past two years. At 5,100 for Q1 2010, the number of jobs in Healdsburg is down 8.9% from its two-year peak in Q4 2008. Moody's Economy.com has predicted that Sonoma County's employment should start seeing improvement during the latter half of 2010. This could be a positive sign for Healdsburg's employment profile, which has largely mirrored that of Sonoma County over the past decade.

POPULATION & INCOME PROJECTION

The population of Healdsburg grew by 6.6% during the past decade and is expected to increase by 2.5% over the next five years. A diminished projection of the five-year population growth rate in Healdsburg is reflective of county-wide expectations.

Between 2000 and 2009, median-household incomes in Healdsburg grew 32.8% nominally. In real dollars (adjusted for inflation), incomes increased 6.6%. Over the next five years, the median-household income for Healdsburg is expected to climb roughly 3.8% nominally, to just over $67,000.

During the past decade, the percentage of households earning less than $50,000 in Healdsburg was reduced from 51% to 37.2%. With the percentage of middle-earning households (between $50,000 and $100,000 per year) remaining relative stable, households earning over $100,000 had the highest percentage growth.

Over the next five years, the percentage of households in Healdsburg earning between $75,000 and $99,999 is expected to increase by 4% percentage points. Other income brackets are expected to remain relatively unchanged.

The office vacancy rate in Healdsburg continued its upward trend in Q1 2010 and is now 16.3%. The office vacancy rate in Healdsburg is considerably below the county average of 24.8%.

Healdsburg's industrial vacancy rate rose significantly from 5.10% in Q2 2008 to 15% in Q1 2010. Currently, Healdsburg's industrial vacancy rate is below the county average of 15.6%, but the disparity is shrinking. Petaluma recorded the highest industrial vacancy rate in Sonoma County at 18.7% for the first quarter of 2010.

Healdsburg's retail vacancy rate, at 5.6% for Q1 2010, is below Sonoma County's average of 9.2% over the same quarter. Retail vacancy rates have remained constant for the last two years.

Although the disparity has shrunk considerably, Healdsburg's residential vacancy rate remains below the county average. Five-year projections suggest Healdsburg's rate will remain around 8.6%.

The value of building permits, which reflect trends in construction activity, have been stagnant over the past decade. Residential construction is down considerably from its high in 2000.

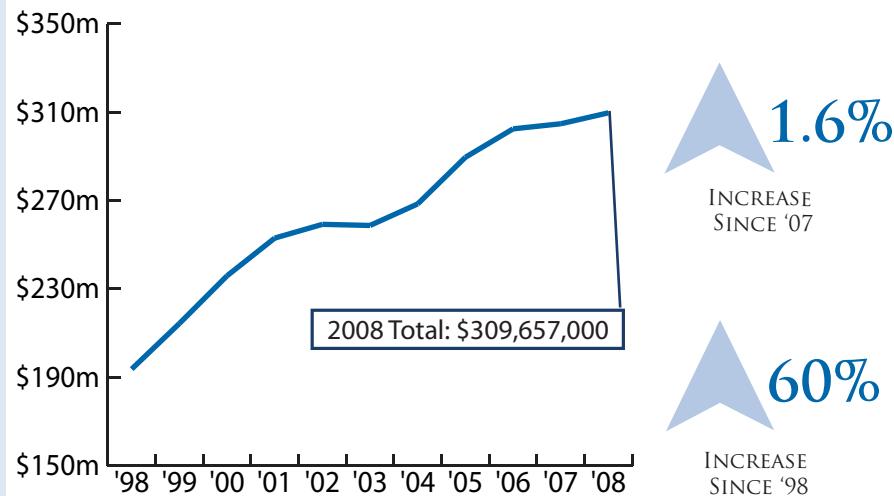

CONSUMER SPENDING & TAXABLE SALES

Although Healdsburg's total taxable sales growth has remained positive over the last decade, rate of growth has been sluggish.

Since 2007, sales have increased 1.6% in Healdsburg compared to a county-wide average drop of 6.5%.

Compared to the national average, Healdsburg residents spend considerably more per-capita on housing, computers, education, and food away from home. They spend considerably less on apparel. Consumers' biggest purchases cover general retail goods, shelter, food at home, and healthcare.
